THE BARON HAS HUNTED.

A German Noblemen's Story of Adventures With Big Game.

Baron Lottwitz of Germany, a nobleman who has killed big game in many lands and who has had some thrilling escapes, is at the Palace hotel.

This distinguished action of nobility and veteran hunter has arrived here after two years' wanderings.

He has been in Calcutta, China, Japan, Australia and the remote and almost unknown places of the world, not excepting the loftier parts of the Himalayas.

He is a man of not much more than 30 years and has a quiet, matter of fact way of talking about the dangerous episodes in his tiger, jackal and lion hunting interesting to notice.

His two big trunks are full of costly weapons and trophies of his desert and jungle.

The baron yesterday told of pursuing jackals in India on horseback, of tracking Bengal tigers in the delta of the Ganges and of curious experiences hunting kangaroos in Australia.

The most thrilling story he told was in reference to the tiger hunting at the mouth of the Bohia river in southern Calcutta, near the Ganges' mouth.

He explained that he equipped a party of natives, who set out down the Bohia in 15 boats. The hunting grounds were a complete jungle.

Many tigers roamed at will there, and among them were not a few man eaters.

"I was fortunate, however, in not falling in with any man eaters," he said, "but I was in the region when one of those ferocious animals had killed as many as 30 or 40 natives.

As many as 340 rupees are paid by the government for the death of any one of them. A complete record is kept of the number of men killed, and the reward paid is according to this number.

"One night on the Bohia river, while I was perched in a tree watching and the natives were below, a tremendously big tiger stole up. It was peculiarly fortunate that I happened to see him, because the natives did not know he was around.

I smelt him before I saw him, and the moment he came into view I turned loose at him. He was a very savage animal and let forth a terrible howl. My aim was good, however, and I succeeded in stopping him in his career.

I had other experience of this kind about the month of the Ganges, and I may say that it always stands the sportsman in hand to be very wary.

"It is very sickly down there, and several of my men died of the fever. The only way to avoid it is to follow the advice of men long in that country. One of the things to do is never to stir in the morning without first eating a good meal. Another thing is to always have a supply of quinine pills and take them three times a day. Then you will never have the fever.

"In India I had a great deal of sport hunting the jackals on horseback. They are little animals, and it takes a good horse to follow them. I managed in this way and by firing rapidly to get a good many of them. The jackals are very plentiful in certain parts of that country, and hunting them is very exhilarating sport.

"The kangaroo hunting which I followed, however, for some time on my arrival in Australia, was even more exciting. You can no longer get good kangaroo hunting anywhere near Sydney or Melbourne, and because of this I pushed out to the frontier. Even in remote parts, however, except in North Queensland, and the country is fenced either as sheep or cattle stations. Where the cattle are the fences are pretty high, and I found it took a remarkably good horse to clear them and to get over the logs and fallen trees found all over many parts. Among the sheep stations, however, the fences were low, and a reasonably good horse could clear them all without difficulty.

"I got a good many kangaroos, and altogether was much pleased with my stay here."—San Francisco Chronicle.

A Queen State of Affairs in New Orleans.

A gentleman of this city who has done much toward adding to the annoyance of the census taker by becoming the father of 12 children has certain peculiar notions. One of these notions was until lately a perfect disregard of the birth registering department of the board of health. One by one the children came, and the busy father, coolly ignoring all such institutions as boards of health, allowed them to pursue the even tenor of their growth unregistered. But even a board of health will turn. A short while ago this gentleman became the father of his twelfth child. He did not have it registered. This was too much. The board of health sent him a notice. He received it. He was busy, and it annoyed him.

"By graces," he said, "I'll teach these fellows how to worry me! If they have the registering fever, I'll give them all the work they want." So the gentleman sat down and made up a list of all his 12 unregistered offspring, and laughing with glee at the thought of the extra work it would cause mailed it to the people who dared to annoy him about one unregistered child. The joke will come when the board of health replies and compels the registration of the entire dozen without deduction for large contracts.—New Orleans Picayune.

Killed a Horse With His Fist.

Tota Rice, a truck farmer of Waco, Tex., is not a prizefighter, but if he should run afoul of some of the supposed fighters they would not get off very easy. Several days ago his horse, that had been grazing in the field, became crazy and made a rush for Tom with open mouth and would probably have seriously injured him had he not leaped aside and struck the horse on the neck with his fist, killing him instantly.

Colorless, Emaciated, Helpless

A Complete Cure by HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA.

This is from Mr. D. M. Jordan, a retired farmer, and one of the most respected citizens of Otego Co., N. Y.

"Fourteen years ago I had an attack of gravel, and have since been troubled with my liver and kidneys.

gradually growing worse. Three years ago I was so low that I could scarcely walk. I looked more like a corpse than a living being. I had no appetite and for six weeks I ate nothing but gruel. I was badly emaciated. I had no more color than a marble statue. Hood's Sarsaparilla was recommended. Before I had finished the first bottle I noticed that I felt better, suffered less, the inflammation of the bladder had subsided, the color began to return to my face, and I had taken three bottles I could eat anything without hurting me. Why, I got so hungry that I had to eat six times a day. I have fully recovered, thanks to Hood's Sarsaparilla.

I feel well and am well. All who know me will be glad to hear of it. Hood's Pills are the best after-dinner pills, assist digestion, cure headaches.
